Suits With Vestees

OCCASIONALLY a new feature to the style catches a means by which and sweeps over the entire country in less than a year. This was the case last year when suits having vests open at the front, revealing vests in contrasting material, were introduced as the finishing off of the season and worn more or less universal demand. They seemed very extraordinary and for this very reason most people thought it would be short lived. But this same feature continues to vary with the seasons, so did an enthusiastic welcome.

Photographer art with the color of the soft and often with a contrasting color interwoven with the soft color in some more popular hues than the soft, light colors. These features are used with great facility in the dressing up of this spring's wardrobe. There is no very great change in the styles, but a great deal of variety in the way of colors and the arrangement of details, as pockets and sleeves, makes the new models very interesting. Dark suit skins have great fashion.

Two examples of the use of vests and underlinings appear in the attractive suits that are shown above. In one of these the vest is made of heavy silk with a wide band of velvet stripes across the top. The designs arrived at without any bias and are quite smart at the bottom of the vest, by means of very large pocket flaps which attract the greater attention, as shown by covering them with embroidery.

Underlinings is introduced as a sort of dark blue cloth having a sort of heavy dressy material with an embossed band at the top. It has a cross-hatched pattern with rows of small buttons on them.
